My First Memories

My first memories take me first to a large meadow. It was a pleasing place with a pond. I would drink from it and enjoy the shady trees when it was hot and sunny. At one end of the meadow was a gurgling brook with a steep bank beyond it.

As a young colt I fed on my mother's milk. I was not ready to eat grass yet.

I spent my day jumping around the field by my mother's side. I often joined the other six colts in rough playful antics.

When spring and then summer arrived it grew warmer. That was the time we slept outdoors, and I used to lie close to my mother. In winter, the cold led us indoor where we slept in the shed near farmer Grey's house.
