◆ Question : 02

(15 marks)

Read the following text and answer the question.

SHARK ATTACK : THE SURPRISING TRUTH

In 1968 a survey was conducted in Australia to determine what single word aroused the most intense emotions. Word such as murder, death, love and poison were tested. The hands – down winner? Shark.

Seven years later, the movie “Jaws” created images so vivid that many Americans who saw it simply stayed on beach and out of the water that summer. Then, just when they thought it was safe to go into the water once again. Hollywood unleashed a second movie, Jaws 2.

Fortunately, fear of shark attacks is out of all proportion to the danger. The average swimmer’s chances of being victimized by a shark are about one in five million. Yet myths misconceptions about sharks persist.

One person who has done much to set the records straight is H. David Baldrige, a U.S. Navy officer scientist and author of the book shark attack. Baldrige recently conducted a computer assisted examination of the navy’s shark attack file(SAF), the most comprehensive collection of its kind in the world. He concentrated on 1,165 documented shark attacks. Here are some of the old wive’s tales he helped dispel:

There are about 100 shark attacks each year , most of which are fatal, Wrong. In recent year the numbers of documented attack world wide has averaged 28, and the mortality rate steadily decreased. Thank to better medical attention, from 46 per cent in 1940 to between 10 and 20 per cent today.

When a shark attacks one person, it will attack others nearby, Generally untrue. Sharks tend to select a single person for attack and ignore others. Thus the risk to rescuers in a shark attack is extremely slight.

A shark circles its victim before attacking

In two out of three cases, the shark was never seen before he attacked. In half the case where it was seen, it was heading straight for the victim.

The often – quoted ability of ‘a single drop of blood’ to drive a shark into a frenzy is difficult to accept. Many sharks attack unwounded swimmers, and then swim away, leaving the victim bleeding profusely.

Shark attack people because they are hungry.

Baldrige’s most startling conclusion is that only a fraction of shark attacks is motivated by hunger. Although sharks aren’t picky eaters (They have been known to eat tin cans), two – thirds of all shark attacks on people have involved a single bite followed by abandonment of the attack. A pattern of behaviour hardly characteristic of a predator bent on killing for food. Why, then, do sharks attack? In murky water it may simply be a case of mistaken identity. Perhaps the best explanation is that they perceive their victim as a threat. “The only way a shark can warn you is with its mouth and teeth”, says Baldrige. Attacks of this kind may be generated by a swimmer who unwittingly trespasses on a shark’s territory or cuts off its escape route.

The fact is that the average person stands very little chance of ever encountering a shark, let alone being attacked by one. About two dozen Americans die every year of bee and wasp stings. Another 150 or 200 are struck down by lightning. And almost 140 people are killed everyday on the nation’s highways. In contrast, there will probably be no more than three dozen shark attacks world wide this year, of which only three or four will be fatal. “Even if there were twice as many fatal shark this year, of which only three or four will be fatal.” says Baldrige, “riding to the beach in a car is far more dangerous than swimming once you get there.”

1) Write True or False beside each sentences in the space given.

- a) The danger involved in shark attacks is relatively less when compared to people’s fear of earth attacks. ()
- b) The number of deaths due to shark attacks has decreased mainly due to the decrease in shark attack ()
- c) Shark attacks in murky water are mostly due to the victims inability to identify the shark ()
- d) The risk to rescuers in shark attack is very high ()
- e) The writer refers to other forms of death such as road accidents and lightning as a form of contrast to the number of shark attack deaths. ()

Gone

Emotions ran through my head

I found my self wishing I was dead

All because you were moving away

I knew I would never see you another day

You got into your car and waved good bye

why oh why did it have to end?

you made me so happy. So carefree

you made it feel okey for me to be me

It's been almost a year since you moved away

but it feels like it was only yesterday

I remember everything you used to do

It may seem impossible but it's true

You were the best friend I ever had

Now that you left me. I am beyond sad

I love and I miss you more than you ever knew you've taught me so much and I want to say thank you
