Test 7

Read the story and answer the questions. (1 x 5 = 5)

As we had had a long walk through one of the markets of Old Delhi, we stopped at a square to have a rest. After a time, we noticed a snake charmer with two large baskets at the other side of the square, so we went to have a look at him. As soon as he saw us, he picked up a long pipe which was covered with coins and opened one of the baskets. When he began to play a tune, we had our first glimpse of the snake. It rose out of the basket and began to follow the movements of the pipe. We were very much surprised when the snake - charmer suddenly began to play jazz tunes and popular modern songs. The snake, however, continued to 'dance' slowly. It obviously could not tell the difference between Indian music and jazz!

Underline the correct answer.

- (1) What did they notice after some time?
(a) two large baskets (b) a square (c) a snake charmer
- (2) Snake charmer's pipe was

There are many places I like to visit in Sri Lanka. Among them, Kandy is the place I like to visit most. I like the cool climate of the area which is surrounded by many mountains. The Temple of the Tooth is one place I like to visit there. Whenever we visit Kandy, we never fail to go there. The Kandy Lake and the Peradeniya Botanical Gardens are some other attractions I love to visit in Kandy.

An interesting book I have read

Out of the books I have read, the novel Madolduwa written by Martin Wickramasinghe has a special place in my thoughts. It is a story about two boys who ran away from home and became successful as farmers. They were mischievous at the beginning of the story but later on they cultivated an island and became hardworking farmers. Out of the two main characters I like Jinna more as he always protects his master, Upali. It is an interesting story.

Test 15

Read the following text and answer the questions given below.

Rice is our staple food and paddy is cultivated in all parts of our country. A hot climate, fertile soil and plenty of water are needed for the successful cultivation of paddy.

Long ago, people lived chiefly in the dry zone. There was not enough water in these areas and tanks were constructed to irrigate fields. An earthen dam was built across a stream and the water was held up to form a reservoir. The early reservoirs were built, maintained and repaired by the people of each village, who were good engineers. These small lakes were known as village tanks.

Later, large reservoirs were constructed by kings like Vasabha, Mahasen, Datusena and Parakramabahu. These giant tanks were used to irrigate large districts, and canals were cut to bring water to these tanks and to connect one tank with another. The Kala wewa was connected to the tanks near Anuradhapura by means of Jaya Ganga, a canal fifty-four miles long. The Minneri, Kavdulu, Giritale and Kantalai reservoirs near Polonnaruwa were combined into a vast irrigation scheme by means of the Alahera canal. The waters of Kala Oya, the Malwathu Oya, the Amban Ganga and the Mahaweli Ganga were utilized to form these early irrigation works which reveal the engineering skills of our ancestors.

In ancient times, water rates were charged by owners of tanks, and a grain tax was collected by royal officials. Since the grain tax was the chief source of revenue, large tanks and canals were constructed and maintained under royal supervision, and the construction of the irrigation works was considered one of the chief duties of a good king.

In times of war or rebellion, however, bunds and canals were damaged and crops were destroyed. Feeder canals were breached and water supplies were cut off whenever rebellions organized by discontented princes or when the country was invaded by foreign armies. During such times central administration of the country was disorganized. Consequently, large reservoirs and canals were not repaired and fields were not cultivated.

In the thirteenth century, when the northern part of the island was conquered by foreign invaders, the ancient cities of Anuradhapura and Polonnaruwa were deserted. The irrigation works in these areas were neglected, human habitation was abandoned and Dry Zone reverted to jungle. It remained in this condition for centuries.
