Bed in summer

In winter I get up at night
And dress my yellow candle light.
In summer, quite the other way,
I have to go to bed by day.
I have to go to bed and see.
The birds still hopping on the tree,
Or hear the grown-up people's feet
Still going past me in the street.
And does it not seem hard to you
When all the sky is clear and blue.
And I should like so much to play
I have to go to bed by day.

There lived in a town of Persia, two painters whose fame had spread far and wide. Both were so good at painting that it was hard to say which of them was the better. So either of them was asked to draw a picture and a judge was appointed to decide which of the two paintings was the better.

One of the painters painted a bunch of grapes that looked so natural that birds came and peaked at the grapes. Everyone was sure that this painting was sure to be declared the better. When they went to the other painter, he pointed to a curtain. The judge advanced forward thinking that the painting was behind the curtain. But he was struck with wonder that the curtain was only a painting on the wall and it looked natural. So both the painters were declared to be equally adept.
